

We Believe in the Promise of Gwinnett!

Here in Gwinnett County Public Schools (GCPS), we believe in the Promise... the promise of our students to reach their potential, the promises on which our employees deliver each and every day, and the promises that we make and keep as an organization to prepare our kids for their best future.

We believe in the power of public education to change lives, set trajectories for the stars, and clear the way for innovation and big thinking. We, as a community, have shown a commitment to public schools and recognized the value of public education. Public education is the great equalizer, ensuring that all students have a shot at success. Our schools help to level the playing field, providing a launching pad for success as our students prepare for college and careers as well as the responsibilities of being contributing members of society and engaged citizens.

We believe that Gwinnett students— from our youngest learners to our graduates heading out into the world— deserve every opportunity for success. Early learning is the foundation on which the K-12 educational experience is built. The stronger the foundation, the better prepared our students are for what happens next... at the next grade or school level and in college, careers, and life. With so many avenues to a successful future, GCPS students have the options and opportunities they need to explore the best route to their dreams. Believing in our students means encouraging them to try new things and supporting them as they think big and reach high. And, equity in the classroom ensures that all students have opportunities to be successful.

We believe that Gwinnett educators are the best in the business. These committed and caring adults believe in our students, broadening their horizons, helping to remove barriers to learning, and paving the way to success for all students. And those who support teachers— school nutrition workers and transportation staff, custodians and office workers, central office staff and school and district leaders— ensure that teachers can dedicate themselves to this critical work.

We believe that it's important for Gwinnett County Public Schools to deliver on the promises it makes to stakeholders. Our entire community— families, students, staff, civic and business leaders, and the wider community— has embraced The Promise of Gwinnett and what it means for the young people in our classrooms. Our community has made good on its belief in our students, schools, and staff members by investing in the success of GCPS.

Thanks to the support and belief of their families, schools, and community, our students can look forward to a future full of promise. We believe!
